UNITED STATES AMITY WITH MEXICO NEAR

Harding and Obregon Apart
Only On Point of Precedence
of Pledge of Order.

Washington, March 19.—Administrative officials consider the recognition of the Obregon Government in Mexico a pressing question that will be worked out in a short time. It became known today that President Warren G. Harding has had a personal, friendly correspondence with the Mexican Government that has resulted in an agreement as to the conditions of recognition.

"The method which, it is believed, will be followed will be settlement of the entire question in one document. Recognition will be extended by this Government and the Mexican Government will take the responsibility of protecting American lives and clear up the retroactive features of the Mexican Constitution at the same time.

The question of which comes first, recognition or a treaty, will be eliminated by the existence of a single protocol.

Elmer Dover Paved Way

The correspondence between the two Presidents, which has brought them into virtual accord, is viewed as unusual. The substance, however, has been verified by the regular routine correspondence through diplomatic channels. It is presumed that the personal correspondence started with the exchange of communications carried from Mexico City to Washington by Elmer Dover.

High officers of this Government think the matter of recognition will work itself out in a short time. They think President Alvaro Obregon will soon be ready to sign the protocol and is waiting until he develops a little more strength so as to be able to meet the objections in the Mexican Congress.

Obregon Causing Delay

While Señor Obregon is understood to be in harmony with the foundation on which the recognition will be based, he has not come to the point of signifying willingness at once to execute the necessary document.

It was pointed out that, in the case of President Carranza, recognition was extended in advance of an agreement which later was not obtained.

While there is no insinuation that Señor Obregon might go back on making a treaty if recognition comes first, officials of this Government take the position that if he is willing to agree in principle there is no reason why the whole matter might not be settled up at the same time. They also desire to avoid any possibility of having to withdraw recognition.

LONDON AWAITING U. S. MOVE

London, March 19.—British business interests with heavy Mexican commitments are pressing for Government action to effect early solution of Anglo-Mexican differences, but correspondents were assured today that the Government will not recognize the Mexican political establishment in advance of American recognition.

SCIENTIST MEASURES KICK FROM KISS BY BLOOD PRESSURE

San Francisco, March 16.—Kisses, some of them, kick up your blood pressure. So says J. V. Breitweiser, of the University of California's Department of Education. He has measured the "kick."

Given one man and one woman who will kiss, Breitweiser told the San Francisco Advertising Club, he would measure the linear extent in millimetres of blood pressure resulting from:

The mistletoe kiss.

The stolen kiss.

* The expert kiss of the finished flirt.

The soul kiss.

Breitweiser said the instrument he uses is so sensitive it will register the domestic kiss; the degree of frigidity in kisses one woman gives another she does not like, and so forth throughout all grades of osculation.

Breitweiser calls his instrument the kissograph.

He gets a man and woman who will kiss; he attaches wires to them; then they kiss. The machine acts week, have about recovered.

automatically. He also said there is no difficulty in obtaining couples to carry on the experiments.

The instrument is an adaptation of the sphygmomanometer, which is a machine psychologists in criminology use to detect lies.

RICHARD WEAVER BARNES DIES AT HOME NEAR BEAVER DAM

Richard Weaver Barnes, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of the county, died at his home about two miles west of Beaver Dam, Thursday at 6 p. m., as a result of infirmities due to advanced age, complicated by an attack of influenza. He was in his eighty-first year, having been born February 9, 1842. He was a son of Hamilton Barnes and Jane (Miller) Barnes, members of the leading pioneer families of the Goshen neighborhood of this county. Mr. Barnes was married in early life to Miss Fanny B. Austin, daughter of the late W. W. Austin. To this union were born the following children, who survive: Mesdames E. L. Bennett, Beda; Saint Rogers, Beaver Dam; Ola Porter, Louisville, and Paul Woodward, New Philadelphia, Ohio; Messrs. Henry S. Barnes, Prentiss; R. D. Barnes, Beaver Dam; L. T. Barnes and Jesse H. Barnes, New Philadelphia, Ohio; E. S. Barnes, Goshen, and Judge W. H. Barnes, Hartford. He is also survived by his wife.

Funeral services were conducted at the home Friday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, by Rev. T. T. Frazier, pastor of the Methodist Church, of which Mr. Barnes was a member. Interment was in Oakwood Cemetery, Hartford.

Mr. Barnes was a good man and a useful citizen. His loss will be sorely felt by a large circle of relatives and friends.

We extend to the bereaved family our most heartfelt sympathy.

Rowe; to their union three children were born, viz: Lelia, who married Mr. Eden Bishop, of Centertown, but is now dead; Alice, who married Mr. Robinson Ashby, of Centertown, also dead; and Mr. J. His remains were conveyed to Elkton, Ky., for interment Tuesday. The deceased is a nephew of Mrs. C. E. Smith, city. He contracted tuberculosis while in the naval service of the United States Government during the war with Germany, and was treated in Government hospitals at Fort Lyons and Denver, Colorado, but the malady failed to respond to treatment and a few weeks ago he was removed to the home of his mother.

Funeral services were conducted from the family residence on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, by Rev. T. T. Frazier, pastor of the Hartford Methodist Church. Interment was in Oakwood Cemetery.

HARDING STANDS PAT ON VIEW OF BONUS QUESTION

House Leaders Go Ahead With

Plan to Put Bill Through, However.

Washington, March 20.—Rep. House leaders failed today to obtain Presidential approval of the compromise soldiers' bonus bill, but went ahead with plans to put the measure through the House. Speaker Gillett refused to permit the measure to be brought up today under a suspension of the rules, however. A special rule will be necessary for its consideration. Leaders were to confer late today as to procedure and the time that House consideration of the bonus would begin.

Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, and four other House members were closeted with the President at the White House this morning for nearly two hours. Upon leaving the Executive's office, Mr. Mondell issued this in writing:

The formal statement issued by Mr. Mondell after the conference, which lasted almost two hours, follows:

"The legislative situation relating to the bonus bill was fully presented to the President with detailed explanation of the provisions which remove the menace of excessive drafts on the Treasury in the immediate future and avoid any programme of added taxation. The President went over the entire situation, with an appraisal of commitments made. He advised the committee that the legislation is a responsibility of Congress and in view of expressions previously made he did not think it essential to offer any recommendation."

ABRAM W. LOGAN

YIELDS TO PNEUMONIA

Abram W. Logan, one of Hartford's most prominent and respected citizens, died at his home on Union Street Friday morning at 1:30 o'clock, as the result of a two weeks' illness of pneumonia. He was in his eighty-sixth year, having been born on October 7, 1836, in Toronto, Canada. After the Civil War Mr. Logan removed to Oil City, Pennsylvania, where he was actively engaged in the oil supply business for thirty years. He was twice married, his first wife having been Miss Jennie Logan, of Canada. To them were born two children, a son, who died in childhood, and a daughter, Florence, who survives them.

On September 15, 1913 Mr. Logan was married to Miss Mary E. Taylor, of Hartford. After an extensive trip abroad they returned here, having purchased the Dr. J. E. Pendleton place, where they have since made their home. Mr. Logan was of a kindly and affable nature and was always interested in the home as well as in the welfare of the community. He will be greatly missed by the large circle of friends he has made during his eight years' stay among us. In addition to his wife and his daughter, Miss Florence, he is survived by one sister, Miss Jennie Logan, of Ingersoll, Canada, all of whom have the sympathy of the entire community.

Funeral services were conducted from the family residence on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, by Rev. T. T. Frazier, pastor of the Hartford Methodist Church. Interment was in Oakwood Cemetery.

ALL U. S. TROOPS ORDERED HOME FROM GERMANY

Withdrawal to Be Completed By

July 1; Pay Dispute Not Factor.

Washington, March 20.—Orders directing the return to the United States by July 1 of all American troops now on the Rhine were issued today by Secretary Weeks.

The order includes the return by the end of the fiscal year of the entire force of approximately 2,000 men excepted from the previous order of several weeks ago under which the homeward movement of the majority of the American Rhine contingent is now in progress.

Secretary Weeks said that the operation of two army transports now being employed in the return of the troops had been ordered continued up to July 1, by which date all of the force would have been withdrawn from the Rhine.

The action of the War Department was merely a continuation of the policy previously announced for withdrawing the American forces from the Rhine territory as early as possible, Mr. Weeks said. It was indicated that the status of army legislation in Congress in no way influenced the department's decision and also that the controversy over payment by Germany for the maintenance of the Rhineland troops was not involved.

Secretary Weeks did not go into detail as to how the functions exercised by General Allen in the Rhineland commission and those of the American forces at Coblenz would be transferred to the Allied commanders. He confined his announcement to the statement that all of the troops would be back in the United States by July 1.

6 YEARS IN JAIL IS GIVEN GHANDI

Term Without Hard Labor, As Report Says British Ask Japanese Aid in India

Ahmedabad, British India, March 18.—Mohandas K. Gandhi, the Indian Nonco-operationist leader who was arrested recently on charges of sedition, was sentenced today to six years' imprisonment without hard labor.

Ghandi's colleague, Shankerlal, banker, Bombay merchant and Nationalist leader, was sentenced today to ordinary imprisonment for one year and fined 1,000 rupees.

Washington, March 18.—"Owing to the critical situation in India, which may at any moment lead to a general uprising, the British Government has asked the Japanese Government for military aid."

Based on Alliance

This statement was made today by the American Commission to Promote Self-government in India. Continuing the commission says:

"Through confidential sources at Tokio and London this commission has received word that the request to the Japanese Government was based on the provision of the Anglo-Japanese alliance which provides for Japanese intervention in event of revolution in India and which remains in force until the ratification of the Four-Power Treaty in which the United States and France are allied with Britain and Japan."

May Involve United States

"No mention of India is made in the Four-Power Treaty, but if that treaty is merely an enlargement of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, as some British and Japanese statesmen maintain, then it is only logical to suppose that this country will be drawn into the Indian trouble."

"It is important that this point be cleared up and if there is any secret understanding between the four governments it should be made known."

BAPTIST REVIVAL CONTINUES

The revival services which began at the Baptist Church in this city on the 13th, inst. are continuing with unabated interest. The preaching is being done by Rev. C. C. Daves, pastor of the Beaver Dam Church. He is being heard by large congregations and the interest manifested is most encouraging. There have already been some decisions. The meeting will probably continue for another week. Services are held at 10 a. m. and at 7:15 p. m.

104 LOCKED UP WHEN SHIP BURNS AT SEA

Passengers in Staterooms and Stokers Driven to Work At Pistol's Point.

New York, March 18.—A thrilling tale of fire at sea, with 104 panic-stricken men and women locked in their staterooms, and stokers held at their posts under the threat of drawn pistols, was related by passengers of the United States liner Potomac when she arrived here today from Bremen.

It was a tale of Yankee pluck and ingenuity—of a skipper's refusal to give up his ship until every hope had been abandoned, and of his acceptance of the "thousand to one chance" which turned a threatening catastrophe into a merely harrowing experience for those aboard.

The fire was discovered at midnight March 2, a few hours after the Potomac, with Capt. William McLeod in charge, sailed from Bremen up the coast of Holland into the North Sea. She had been steaming along on a smooth sea when suddenly, with howls of warning, the Spanish and Filipino stokers bounded from the hold and started for the lifeboats.

Officers, with drawn revolvers, ordered them back to the fireroom, which had become an inferno of smoke with flames billowing from an adjoining compartment, where mattresses, life preservers and ship's stores had mysteriously taken fire.

The dread cry of "fire" spread quickly through the ship. The 104 passengers broke from their staterooms and made for the lifeboats. Captain McLeod sent stewards to herd them back and prevent the frenzied ones from leaping overboard.

Chief Engineer E. M. Garland already had placed guards over the boiler-room crews, and with streams of hose were spouting tons of water on the blaze.

Power Rooms Flooded
The engine and firerooms were flooded with water, but huge clouds of smoke pouring from the hatchways and the almost unbearable heat around the stokers, next to the fire, gave evidence that it was gaining headway.

At 1 a. m. the fire had become so fierce that the decks were hot. A 4 o'clock the Potomac slowed down to half speed. At 4:50 Captain McLeod ordered the engines stopped, and the blazing craft rolled sluggishly about while the whole crew turned fire fighters.

Seamen went over the sides in bos'n's chairs with sledge hammers, smashed in the cast iron port lids, and directed their hose into the heart of the fire, but without effect. Even live steam turned into the hatchways, failed to retard the flames.

At 8:20 a. m. after the S. O. S. had been sent out and a rescue vessel was heaving to, to await the result of the battle, Captain McLeod decided that, rather than beach his ship he would try a stunt he learned during the war, while dodging enemy submarines.

Bilge Water Does Work
He steamed ahead at top speed, until the whole ship trembled with the vibration and her outline was almost obscured by the dense smoke sweeping astern.

Suddenly he ordered the rudder hard over. As the vessel careened in the "come about" her starboard side lifted so sharply as to throw the tons of water in her hold up along her sides and over the heart of the fire.

Immediately the flames subsided, and at 4 p. m., sixteen hours after the alarm was sounded, the fire was under control and the vessel resumed her voyage.

The Potomac still had about thirty tons of water in her hold when with a list to port, she steamed in today.

ASSEMBLY ENDS STORMY SESSION; ROAD BILL FAILS

Morrow's Message to Adjourn At Midnight Ignored; Bills Enrolled.

Frankfort, Ky., March 16.—The Kentucky General Assembly adjourned sine die shortly after 4:30 o'clock this morning. The senate adjourned at 4:32 a. m., and the house at 4:43 a. m.

The last three and a half hours in the senate and the eight and a half in the house were spent in enrolling bills and sending them to the governor. The final measure to be enrolled and signed was Arch L. Hamilton's bill providing that fees of inheritance tax appraisers shall be limited to not in excess of one-tenth of one per cent.

The Hamilton bill and a bill introduced in the house by S. A. Cary making Middlesboro, Guthrie and Fulton highway construction centers, were misplaced in the house and this fact was not discovered until 3 o'clock this morning when all senate bills had been enrolled and sent to the governor.

The remainder of the time was spent waiting for the house enrolling clerks to complete their work.

Wait On Governor

At 4:25 o'clock a committee composed of Senators Perry and Welch and Representatives W. D. Watkins and A. W. Dorsey waited on Governor Morrow and informed him that the assembly was ready to adjourn. The governor announced that he had no further message for the assembly and on the return of the committees to their respective houses adjournment was taken.

The closing night of the session was marked by the defeat of the $50,000,000 road bond bill in the senate. The measure was amended to include the so-called Sibert commission named in the Simmons highway reorganization bill and a number of members of who had been in favor of submission of the bond issue to the people at the next election voted against it.

Democrats in the senate regained their control of that body with the return of Senator Walter G. Dycus, who has been absent from the capital since Thursday when he refused to vote to override the governor's veto on the blind and illiterate voters bill, a companion measure for the Louisville non-emblem bill. The Smith-Minor general registration bill, was passed over the chief executive's veto but the blind and illiterate voters measure was not acted upon although the veto already had been overridden in the house.

It was said that Senator Dycus was adamant in his determination not to vote for this measure.

The governor last night vetoed the Flanery bill allowing pensions to women who married Confederate veterans prior to passage of the pension act in 1912. The veto was sent to the house at midnight and the roll was called on the question of overriding the veto. The house was in an uproar as the roll was being called, Republicans and Democrats scurrying and pushing one another about the clerk's desk. The veto was declared to have been overridden and was attested to the senate, but no action was taken by that body.

Salary Bill Dies

Another bill that failed of passage at this session was the Park house bill limiting the salaries of county officials who are paid by fees to $5,000 a year.

A feature of last night's session was the fact that the clocks in the house and senate chambers were not stopped or turned back. Old members of the assembly stated that never in their experience had they known of a Kentucky legislature continuing after midnight on the final day of the session without stopping or turning back the clock. The room housing the master clock in the capital building was closely guarded throughout the night to prevent tampering with the timing apparatus.

Morrow Ignored

The assembly refused to pay any attention to a message sent to the house and senate at 12:15 o'clock this morning by Governor Edwin Morrow calling attention to the fact that the hour of midnight had passed and asserting that the session had been automatically ended at midnight. In the House the reading of the message did not cause any flurry but in the senate it brought forth an attack on the governor by Senator Frank E. Daugherty, of Bardstown, urging the senate to send word to the governor "to attend to his own business and we will attend to ours." Majority members of both houses asserted that the legislative day would not end until 10 a. m., while the Repubicans claimed that as the constitution says: "Calendar Day," shall be a legislative day, the session automatically ending at midnight."

Although it was expected that Governor Morrow would veto the Simmons highway commission reorganization bill at the last minute in order to insure its death without any court action being resorted to, no such action was taken. The governor, when he received the bill ten days ago, received it as an unauthenticated document from the senate, because he said the lieutenant governor had not signed it and it had not been legally passed, continued this attitude last night. Senator R. C. Simmons, sponsor for the bill, asserted today that the measure had become a law and would have to be tested in the courts, as a result of the governor's action.

MRS. HOLMES CUMMINS
DONER OF POE MEMENTO

A lock of hair from the head of Miss Eliza White, who inspired Edgar Allan Poe to write his poem "To Eliza," was presented to the Richmond Poe Shrine today by Mrs. T. D. Pendleton Cummins, of 105-A North Third Street, upon accepting an invitation to become a charter member of the Shrine. Miss White was the daughter of Thomas H. White, who owned "The Southern Literary Messenger" when Poe was the editor.

Mrs. Cummins was given the lock of hair by Miss Bell Terese Lyon, a niece of Miss White, who fashioned the hair into a braid and wore it until she died, the Anglo-Saxon fairness blending pleasingly with the silver of Miss Lyon's.

Miss White told Mrs. Cummins that she always remembered the visit of Poe to the house of Dr. Beale, where he recited "The Raven." Poe's reading of the immortal poem "made her flesh creep," Miss White afterward said, and she never forgot the memorable occasion.

All of the priceless mementos collected by Mrs. Cummins during years of search eventually will be given the Poe Shrine. These include a piece of the walnut bannister salvaged by C. B. Norvell from the old Swan Tavern, where Poe spent his last night in Richmond. A picture of Dr. Amaso Converse, who officiated at Poe's marriage, also was presented today.

Articles on her Poe research work published by Mrs. Cummins in leading American magazines have elicited widespread comment, including an editorial by Henry Watterson in the Courier-Journal, and an article in "The Writer," of Boston. A short story, "The 1827 Tamerlane," published in "The Argonaut," dealt with the supposed finding of the fourth missing Tamerlane.

Mrs. Cummins is a short story writer, having published stories in William Marion Reedy's "Mirror," including one of the last bought by Mr. Reedy, the "Bellman," and other literary periodicals.—Richmond (Va.) Evening Dispatch.

Mrs. Cummins is a daughter of the late Dr. J. E. Pendleton. She was born and spent her girlhood in Hartford, where she is pleasantly remembered by a host of friends.

A GOOD FRIEND

A good friend stands by you when in need. Hartford people tell how Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test. Miss Emma E. Park, of Washington St., endorsed Doan's four years ago and again confirms the story. Could you ask for more convincing testimony?

"I can certainly praise Doan's Kidney Pills because they are an excellent kidney remedy," says Miss Park. I suffered with a dull backache and dizziness. Black spots came before my eyes and my kidneys didn't act right. Mornings I got up feeling tired and worn out. I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills through the newspapers and started their use. This remedy did me a lot of good and I consider it excellent." (Statement given November 16, 1916.)

On January 25, 1921, Miss Park said: "It is not often I feel the need of Doan's Kidney Pills since I publicly endorsed them in 1916. When I do have a little trouble with my kidneys, a few Doan's never fail to promptly cure me. I am glad at any time to tell others about Doan's."

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING APPROVED AT OWENSBORO

The campaign to handle the Green river type of tobacco thru a co-operative marketing association was formerly launched at a monster meeting held at the Plaza theatre in Owensboro on Wednesday afternoon. It is estimated that more than 1,500 planters and business men heard the co-operative marketing plan presented by Aaron Sapiro, California marketing expert, who successfully conducted the campaign to organize the Burley district of Kentucky.

At the close of Mr. Sapiro's address unanimous approval was given by a rising vote to the co-operative marketing plan.

Immediate steps will be taken to organize every county in the Green river district. The campaign to secure at least two-thirds of the growers to agree to the co-operative marketing plan will be launched at once. The campaign will continue until October.

Mr. Sapiro arrived in Owensboro from Henderson and was met at the station by a committee of citizens and escorted to the hotel where he held a reception. About 100 representative citizens occupied seats on the stage at the theatre. Growers were in attendance at the meeting from all of the counties of the Green river district and Southern Indiana.

Tribute to Judge Bingham

Following a short presentation speech by W. C. Haycraft, who paid a glowing tribute to Judge R. W. Bingham, of Louisville, for his disinterested efforts to assist the farmers of Kentucky by establishment of the co-operative marketing system throughout the entire state. Mr. Sapiro then took the stage, and without reference to any other subject launched into his message for the tobacco growers.

The speaker assured his audience that the co-operative association would go over and go over big.

He said that 80 per cent of the Burley growers had become members of the Burley association, and he was certain that 90 per cent of the dark tobacco growers would gladly join hands with one another to start a movement that would mean prosperity, happiness and a higher standard of living. He referred to the fact that California, his native state, ranked first in the grade of rural schools, while Kentucky stood forty-fifth in line, but three states in the Union having worse rural schools than Kentucky.

Fruit Growers Independent

He attributed the high standard of living and the many phases of prosperity of California to the co-operative marketing idea. He said it had taken twenty-eight years to arrive at absolute independence on the part of the fruit growers of California.

Fruit Growers Independent

Mr. Sapiro told his audience, was not an experiment, neither was it a novel idea. The greatest corporation in Great Britain, he said, was the great co-operative marketing association which was handling every class of merchandise in the United Kingdom. He brought down for many years the history of the co-operative marketing project and told of the organizing in associations of the cotton growers of the South and of many other commodities in various other sections of the country. The Dominion government in Canada has adopted the California plan, with modifications to suit the exigencies of the situation, and will put it into operation throughout the entire country to the North.

"There is no escaping the law of supply and demand, but we propose to substitute the demand at the point of consumption for the demand at the point of production," the speaker said.—Owensboro Messenger.

ATTENTION, EX-SERVICE MEN!

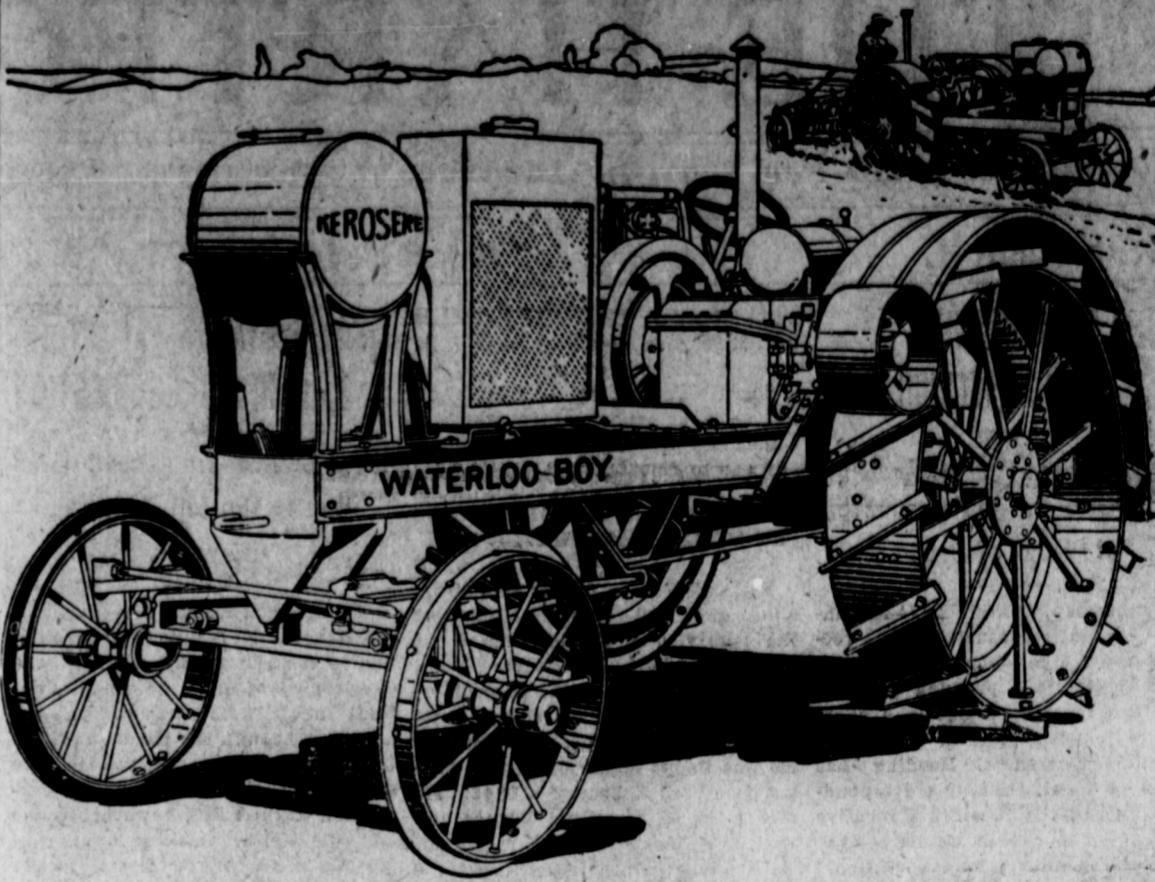

You will no doubt remember that the National War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association set aside an educational service fund for the benefit and use of ex-service men and all of this money has been used in general scholarships and collegiate scholarships.

After checking up and closing out this fund they discovered that they had a small balance on hand and therefore have allotted it out to the various states for use among the ex-service men who may desire to take a correspondence course.

The conditions are that the educational service fund will pay one-half of the expense of any course which a man may choose in the United Y. M. C. A. Extension Schools.

The maximum amount which would be paid would be $67.50 which is half of the highest priced course. If a man desires to take two or three courses 50 per cent of which would not exceed $67.50, he could do this.

You no doubt know that the Y. M. C. A. Correspondence School was

CAPITOL CULLINGS

Washington, D. C., March 18.—This administration has completed its first year; the President says that its great accomplishments "speak for themselves." If they do, their voice remains unheard by the great majority of the people, who are practically agreed that it has been a year of wasted and misspent time, and that the people who voted Harding into the White House have not even "had a run for their money." To hear the voice of these wonderful but unlisted accomplishments, the ear of the public would have to be equipped with Mr. Edison's new invention, which is said to be so capable of multiplying sound that it can hear a molecule when it turns over for another nap.

The President may have thought the list of achievements so tedious that he had no time to enumerate every great blessing flowing forth to gladden the happy and prosperous toilers who make the welkin ring with their shouts of approval as they cast their sweaty caps in air. Or could it be that the list is like the short and simple annals of the poor and would remind the public that the administration has been trying to dip away with a teaspoon the ocean of our difficulties?

What is the answer? Here it is, here is the list of accomplishments completed to date:

1. The appropriation of twenty million dollars from the grain corporation's funds (profits made off the wheat growers) to relieve starving in a section of Russia, while starving at home is overlooked.

2. The passage of the maternity bill with most of the good features left out.

3. A good roads bill.

4. The Alaska bill, turning over all of Alaska's resources to the Secretary of the Interior, so he can reward the friends of the Administration to his heart's content.

5. Buying a Senate seat for Newberry at $200,000 per.

To list the failures would require columns. The tariff bill is deadlocked; the re-apportionment bill failed in the House because the Republican caucus could not agree on it. The soldier-bonus bill has been deadlocked repeatedly and no prophet is so bold as to predict the outcome. But the ship-bonus (in this case the money would go to the rich and powerful ship-owners) is being energetically pushed by the President. (It all depends on who gets the bonus.) The treaties made by the Disarmament Conference are held up in the Senate. This conference, by the way, was provided for six years ago in the Naval Appropriation Act of 1916, in a Democratic Congress and the law was signed by a Democratic President. Even the money to cover the expenses was then appropriated; all Harding had to do was obey the law and call it. On foreign immigration there has been an utter failure to legislate. The taxation laws have been revised with measures which even the Republicans admit are unsatisfactory compromises. Taxation has been reduced very slightly and the expenses of the government not at all. The Irrigation and Reclamation Bill has been lost in the Committee—no action of any sort. Budget reform a failure. Almost every Member of the House who has spoken on the subject has attacked it. And so on through the list—many thousands of bills introduced, billions of dollars appropriated in excess of pre-war appropriations, but no relief afforded to anyone anywhere. Wheat has risen in price—but it is all out of the hands of the farmers; they get none of the benefit, but all of the people have to pay more for their flour and their bread. In only this one thing has the Administration kept its promise, and this promise has been kept to the ear only, for the increase at this time is an evil instead of a good.

The Washington News appeared the other day, on the anniversary of Harding's inauguration, with a group of ten pictures of the President on the front page, pictures taken at different times when he was engaged in various occupations; curiously enough, only one represented him sitting at his desk, at work; in the others he was fishing, golfing, strolling in the park, horseback-riding, yachting, etc. But, with all that, it can be truly said that he never went on more than one week-end vacation in any single week. Old Doc Sawbones, fearing the President might acquire lens-paralysis from standing in front of the camera too constantly, has ordered him off to Florida; of course that great Brigadier-General of Homoeopathy has to go along to see that the President doesn't receive a fatal golf-ball wound in the cosmogony. Attorney General Daugherty, failing under the terrific strain of sending hordes of wealthy malefactors to the stocks every day, who hears the call of Palm Beach; Secretary Christian, contracting the golf and camera maladies through infection, gets the same prescription; Mrs. Harding, weak from trying on many ermine wraps, is also in the party.

Germany is again meeting her reparations payments. It must be galling to a million or two of German democrats, who helped put Harding in the White House, to realize that it was Secretary Hughes' imperative note to Germany, just after Harding was inaugurated, that settled Germany's fate in this respect. The Government of Germany, knowing how much German-Americans had done toward the election of Harding, delayed and stalled in every possible way until Harding reached the White House, depending on his moral support to weaken and break down the demands of the Allies for settlement. But Hughes spoke on May 3, 1921, saying: "This Government strongly urges the German Government at once to make directly to the Allied Governments clear, definite and adequate proposals which would in all respects meet its just obligations." It was that sentence which broke the hopes of the German Government and caused it to bow in the dust before the French and English. Did Republican politicians lead the German-American voters to believe the Harding Government would lend its moral aid and support to the Fatherland? If not, how did it happen that this solid vote was cast, for Harding? And what are those voters' feelings now when they think of Hughes' note?

Chairman Rouse of the Democratic Congressional Committee has issued the following statement:

"Recently there was a luncheon at the Raleigh Hotel in this city at which a number of Republicans who expect to be candidates at the fall election and several managers of the motion picture industry were present. At this luncheon it was pictured in glowing colors the things that could and would be done for the Republican party by using the big moving picture trust to flood the country with propaganda helpful to the Republicans."

"The Democratic organization in charge of the congressional elections desire to take this means of notifying Democrats everywhere of this declared intention."

"I do not believe the men who own the controlling stock in the motion picture industry will countenance this plan. In the first place, they have too much sense to jeopardize the success of their business, and, in the second place, I believe most of them are Democrats. Even the Republican theatrical men know that everything shown on the screen in recent months connected with the present administration has been unpopular. Every theatre goer comments on this. Before this procedure is allowed to start, it would be well for the heads of the business to reflect, and to ask themselves if they can afford to go into politics at this time."

"My own belief is that the movies should and do play a great part in the education of the young and develop good sentiment, but they will fail in this great mission and fall from a business standpoint unless they do two things—keep clean and keep out of politics."

Real Americans are treated at too frequent intervals to nauseating exhibitions of Ambassador Harvey's undignified boot-licking of the English. After the last incident occurred some American newspaper man in London got out a story that the President was about to recall Harvey. Of course the Associated Press immediately asked the President if this was true, giving him an opportunity to at least give Harvey a hint by declining to discuss the matter; but the President bluntly denied it, thus leaving the inference that he endorsed Harvey's performances. The newspaper man over in London probably realized that there are some men you just can't help.

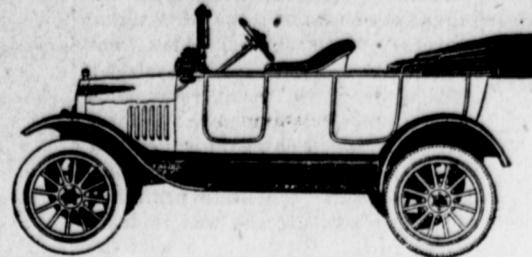

A Missouri editor has suggested a new way to pay the bonus—he gets the idea from the recent action of the Senate in voting Henry Ford's seat to Newberry. He says it should be easy; if a seat in the Senate is worth $200,000, why not sell them all to the highest bidders and use the money to pay the soldiers? And then there is the Supreme Court—the big predatory interests should be willing to pay a million dollars a piece for five or six of the jobs, and a few millions for the Presidency—last time it cost the Republican party almost nine millions to pick that plum. And then there is the control of the House—the tariff beneficiaries and the fellows who have to pay the big surtaxes might use a lot of the jobs at $100,000 each. Even Herrick's seat might get a bid.

The city of Saco, Maine, had a mayoral election the other day and the Democrat, who was wintering in Florida, was elected, carrying a majority election.

FORGOTTEN?

Saturday was the fourth anniversary of the opening of the final drive of the Germans against the Allied armies on the Western front, in the World War. Four years ago today the Hun hordes were plunging ruthlessly through the Allied lines in Belgium and France. The decisive hour of the World War was approaching. All eyes were focused on America and the mighty effort she was making to throw her resources and her battalions into the breach and save the world and civilization. And the almost unbelievable was accomplished. The invaders again were turned back and peace with victory assured. But before that longed-for goal was reached many a gallant young American made, at the end of the long hard road, the supreme sacrifice. But they gave themselves willingly and proudly, while the nation at home showered
them with praises and promises.
They were told that, when they came marching home, nothing would be too good for them. But now only four short years have passed and it sometimes looks as if we were trying our best to forget those gallant lads.

Yes, the war is over, thank God,
but what of the heroes who "sleep in Flanders Fields" while the agony of their loss still grips the hearts of their loved ones around us? Is it over for the army of invalids who are still suffering in our hospitals, sanitariums and asylums? The Government has its chance to show its appreciation of the patriotism of our boys who rallied to its support
in its time of need.

Every possible care should be accorded our ex-service men and an honest effort made to adequately compensate them in so far as is reasonably possible. A good beginning has been made, but justice will not be fully done until each man is accorded adjusted compensation, or, as it is popularly called, a bonus. It is not that the veterans fought for mercenary reasons for the pay was ridiculously small and the hope of reward pointed to an indefinite future.

Neither is the obligation of such legislation determinable by the organized demand of the veteran's themselves or its absence. The whole question is, as we see it, one of elementary justice. The civilian war workers and the war-contract manufacturers did their bit and were well paid for it; the shipping trust and the railroads, the big interests and the politicians, all have fared well at the public trough, but only a crumb awaits the doughboy and the gob, the real saviors of the nation. The favored classes who have had theirs, tell us patronizingly
that the bonus would be a bad, yea, a ruinous business policy. It seems we have an unlimited supply of public money for every governmental parasite, but only a pittance for the boys who won "over there." We don't pretend to be economists, but we know rank injustice when we see it.

As to a method of financing the bonus, there are a number of practical methods which could be adopted without serious results to the business of the country and without entailing an onerous burden on the individual citizen. Any of the plans for raising such revenue that have been suggested would probably prove adequate and satisfactory except the proposed sales tax. Such a tax on poverty should not be adopted as long as the war-bred millionaires are exempt from the payment of their just share of the debt of patriotism. Let's give the boys their dues.

CIRCUIT COURT ADJOURS

The jury in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Jesse Sublett, indicted for the murder of Marshal Pherson, of Rockport, which was still deliberating when last week's Herald went to press, returned a verdict shortly before noon Wednesday, finding the defendant guilty and fixing his punishment at life imprisonment in the State penitentiary.
Sublett's defense was insanity which now appears to have been entirely simulated, as Sheriff G. A.
Ralph and Mr. Lon Barnard, who conveyed him to Eddyville, report that his improvement in health, and spirits and the cessation of his insanity camouflage, progressed rapidly as he neared his destination.
It looks like this was another unfortunate case of pure faking which served its purpose of hoodwinking some of the jurors. It is reported that the verdict was a compromise one, four or more of the jurors being for the death penalty, some for a 21-year sentence and perhaps one or two favoring an even lighter sentence.

The remainder of the term, after the conclusion of the Sublett case, was consumed in the disposition of various suits or motions of an important, but less spectacular nature.
The case of the Commonwealth vs.
Marvin Shields, who was indicted
at this term for the murder of Watt Ranney, was continued on account of the continuing indisposition of Judge Wilson, who had been struggling against the onslaught of the grippe for over two weeks. The March term was finally adjourned
Friday afternoon.

C. B. CARDEN LOSES
HOUSE BY FIRE

The two-story residence of Mr.
C. B. Carden, on the corner of Clay and Frederica streets, Hartford, was destroyed by fire which it is thought, originated from a spark or burning soot falling on the shingle roof, about six o'clock yesterday morning. The volunteer fire fighters responded promptly, but the fire got under such headway before a long enough ladder could be obtained, that it was too late to save the structure. However there was plenty for the willing workers to do in the way of protecting the neighboring residences from the sparks and burning fragments driven before a high west wind.

The house was practically a total loss. $5,000 would be a conservative estimate of its value. Insurance amounting to $2,000 was carried. All the contents of the first floor were saved and a goodly percentage of the household effects in the upper story. This loss was also partially covered by insurance.

CROMWELL CONSOLIDATED
DATED SCHOOL CLOSES
SUCCESSFUL TERM

The first year's work of the Cromwell Consolidated School, the first of its kind in the Green River country, came to a close Friday, the 17th. inst. The closing exercises were held in the school auditorium that evening. A large crowd was present. The chief feature of the program was an address by State Superintendent of School George Colvin. We are informed that Mr.
Colvin made one of the best educational addresses ever heard in Ohio

County. He was introduced by Ex-
County Superintendent Ozna Shultz.

The term just closed continued
eight months with a total enrollment of 146, twenty-seven of whom were taking high school work. Prof. I. S. Mason, the principal, deserves the greatest credit for the high degree of success attained this year under his supervision.

BIG DROP SEEN

IN FARM VALUES

Average of $85 Per Acre on Kentucky Land In 1920 Falls to $57 in 1922

Louisville, Ky., March 17.—The average values of improved farm lands in Kentucky have fallen to about two-thirds what they were March 1, 1920, according to the March crop report issued today by the United States bureau of markets and crop estimates in co-operation with W. C. Hanna, state commissioner of agriculture.

Kentucky farmers on March 1, 1922, held about 83 per cent. of their previous five-year average amount of corn, 78 per cent. of wheat and 72 per cent. of oats, the report said. The carry-over of corn and oats March 1, 1922, from the 1921 crop was large, but these crops in Kentucky in 1921 were much smaller than the 1920 crops.

Average land values, according to reports from farmers and others throughout Kentucky, the report said, "have fallen from $85.00 per acre average for improved farms
March 1, 1920, to $57.00 average,
March 1, 1922 and from $62.00 average for unimproved farm lands,
March 1, 1920, to $42.00 average,
March 1, 1922. As there have been comparatively few sales during the last several months, these estimated values are based partly on previous sales and on prices at which farmers now are holding, as well as on recent sales, this year's valuations being, therefore, largely estimates.

The average amount of corn on Kentucky farms, March 1, 1917, to 1921, inclusive, has been about 40,- 647,000 bushels, and of oats about 2,001,000 bushels. Of last year's Kentucky corn crop, 41 per cent., or 33,682,000 bushels, still was held by farmers, March 1, 1922. About 12 per cent. of Kentucky's 1921 wheat crop, or 761,000 bushels, was held on farms March 1, 1922. Of the 1921 Kentucky oat crop farmers held 26 per cent., or 1,447,000 bushels, March 1, 1922."

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman G. Barrett took their little son, Lynn Culley, to Louisville early Friday morning for examination and treatment. Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Porter spent the week-end here. Mrs. Porter has just recently returned from a visit with her sisters in Georgia. While there she was quite ill, but is about back to normal. We wish Alex the very best wherever he goes.

FARM EXTRACTS

INFORMATION FROM THE EXPERIMENT STATION — AGRICULTURAL PAPERS AND THE COUNTY AGENT'S OFFICE

Half Of Hatching Eggs Turn Out To Be Blanks

Kentucky farmers annually lose more than 24 million eggs and 12 million chicks through their efforts to rear chickens to maintain the ten million hens on farms of the State, according to poultrymen at the College of Agriculture. These figures mean that one-half of all the eggs incubated fail to hatch and nearly one-half of all the chicks hatched die before reaching market size or maturity, the specialists say.

The main causes which they outline for this loss during incubation and the first few weeks of brooding are due to the management of the poultry used as breeders, the care of eggs previous to and during incubation, and the operation of the incubator. The cost of Kentucky chicks could be reduced more than $500,000 each year by increasing the hatch from 50 to 75 chicks from each 100 eggs set, it is said.

"The first step toward more and better chicks is to produce good quality eggs," J. H. Martin, in charge of the college poultry work, said. "Eggs suitable for producing healthy, vigorous chicks must be fertile, fresh in quality, normal in size, shape and shell texture and produced by healthy, vigorous stock. They should be kept in a clean, well ventilated room having a temperature of about 50 degrees. Ten days is the longest period eggs should be held before being placed in machines and the shorter the time they are held the better will be the hatch."

"While the hen is a good incubator of eggs, she is being replaced rapidly by the hot air, hot water or electric machines, all of which give good results under proper management.

The type of machine to buy is the one that is durable, built of good materials, well insulated from the outside temperature and easily cleaned. It also should have a heating device that is capable of supplying sufficient heat, and a heat control that is accurate. Ample provision for ventilating the egg chamber is important. Operation of the machine is best done according to the manufacturer's directions."

Two Causes Are Cited For Soybean Failures

Failures in growing soybeans for the first time are due largely to the fact that the beans are planted too deep or that they are not inoculated before seeding, Ralph Kenney, crops extension specialist at the College of Agriculture is pointing out to many Kentucky farmers who will try the crop for the first time this year.

In most Kentucky soils, from one-half to an inch is probably deep enough to cover the seeds. Corn planter attachments for planting soybeans take care of most of this trouble by dropping the bean seed through a separate opening and allowing part of the soil to fall on the corn before the bean drops.

Although soybeans grow well on good soils without inoculation, they take all the nitrogen which they require for growth from the soil when grown under these conditions. On the other hand, most Kentucky soils are of medium fertility and consequently inoculation is necessary for best growth. For this purpose, soil from the top four inches of a field that grew inoculated beans last year will be satisfactory. A quart of soil will inoculate a bushel of beans.

The soil for inoculating may be gathered now and placed in a corner of the barn until time for seeding. In inoculating the beans, a bushel of them is placed in a box or tub and slightly moistened with water after which the powdered soil is sifted over them, care being taken to see that all seeds have some soil on them. They should be planted immediately after treating.

Burly Wool Results In Big Annual Loss

With the average Kentucky sheep shearing about five pounds of wool, farmers in the State lose about 50 cents in each fleece that is marketed with burs in it, sheep specialists at the College of Agriculture have estimated in pointing out the advantages of removing these before selling the wool. Wool containing burs always is discriminated against by buyers, the price last year for burly wool being approximately two-thirds of that paid for clean wool. Wool worth 30 cents a pound will bring only 20 cents when it contains burs. In view of the fact that the State produces about 3,000,000 pounds of wool each year, a reduction of ten cents a pound on that containing burs represents a heavy annual loss to farmers of the State which could be avoided, the specialists say.

On the college farm, we have found that the burs can be clipped out more quickly and easily before the sheep are sheared than they can after the shearing has been done," L. J. Horlacher, in charge of the sheep work said. "Then too, if the grower attempts to clip or pick out the burs after shearing, the fleece is likely to be torn apart so that it will not be in such good market condition."

400 Morgan Farmers See Pruning Methods

As the result of a number of pruning demonstrations held in different parts of the county by County Agent R. B. Rankin, many Morgan County farmers have been taught how to clean up their orchards as the first step in increasing their productiveness, according to a report. A total of 35 demonstrations held in the county were attended by approximately 400 farmers.

More Home Grown Feeds Plan Of Larue Farmers

In line with their plans to increase the amount of protein feeds grown on farms of Larue County, members of the farmers' organization, two dairy association and interested farmers will co-operate with County Agent J. W. Jones and the extension division of the College of Agriculture at Lexington in carrying on a campaign for 1,000 acres of soybeans and cowpeas to be grown for hay, according to a report. Because of the shortage of home grown feeds, many dairymen in this section of the State have been buying commercial dairy feed, cottonseed meal and bran to keep up the butterfat production of their cows.

Farm* And Home News From Over Kentucky

In order to help farm boys and girls of Allen County get started in the production of purebred animals, leading banks in the county will finance the purchasing of pigs for members of the junior agricultural club there, a report from County Agent A. M. Allen states.

As a result of the winter egg laying project being conducted over the State by the College of Agriculture extension division, many Livingston County farmers are learning better methods of obtaining higher egg production from their hens, County Agent L. C. Pace reports. Chief interest is centered around the leading flocks in the county, which as a general rule, are the ones that are receiving a balanced ration, are well housed and that have been culled to remove the loafers, the report states.

Owners of purebred White Wyandotte flocks in Webster County are distributing purebred hatching eggs to their neighbors in order to further the plans to make this breed the standard for the county, County Agent Lloyd E. Cutler reports. Members of the junior agricultural clubs in the county, who are raising poultry as their project, also will obtain eggs from the same source.

With a total of 198 farm boys and girls enrolled in junior agricultural clubs, this work is continuing to develop in Lewis County, according to a report of County Agent R. O. Bate. Club schools which are held every ten days and which deal with some agricultural or home subject are the latest development in interesting the farm youngsters.

Sudan Grass Gains Favor As Hay And Pasture Crop

Although only a small acreage of it was grown in the State last year,

Sudan grass has demonstrated its usefulness to Kentucky farmers, both as a pasture and hay crop, and indications are that more farmers will try it during the coming year, according to crops specialists at the College of Agriculture. Not more than 200 acres were grown in 1921 but it is probable that this will be increased to about 2,000 acres this year.

The grass, which is a fine-stemmed sorghum, is possibly more valuable in the State for pasture than it is for hay, this being especially true in the case of dairymen and farmers who are raising large numbers of hogs. From the time that it is a foot high, the grass will carry about 1,000 pounds of live weight of any class of stock an acre. On good land, the carrying capacity is even greater. The crop has further advantages in that the seed is cheap, ranging around four cents a pound, it is relished by all classes of stock and can be grown on any type of soil. The grass grows rapidly during July and August until killing frosts.

In Kentucky, it usually is seeded from May 1 until July and is cut for hay when the first heads appear. It is possible to get two crops of hay a season from it and some pasture in addition. From 10 to 20 pounds of seed is used an acre. This may be broadcasted and harrowed in or drilled with a wheat drill set at about two pecks of flax an acre, the latter method being preferable. The heavier rate of seeding is best both for hay and pasture purposes.

J. S. King, a dairyman at Somerset, is among the Kentucky farmers who have obtained good results with the crop. Mr. King grew 18 acres in 1921 and will sow an equal acreage this year. He cut one crop of hay and then grazed the grass for the remainder of the season. E. P. Maggard, Flemingsburg, estimated that he harvested seven tons of field-cured hay an acre from two crops in 1921.

Calloway Farmers Plan For Orchard Improvement

Interest among Calloway County farmers in the better care and management of their fruit trees has experienced considerable increase this spring over that shown last year, County Agent J. B. Gardner has reported to the College of Agriculture extension division. Eleven demonstrations have been held in different parts of the county to show farmers the best methods of pruning and spraying their trees while 12 farmers have ordered spray pumps.

Seasonal Tips For Gardeners

Since the garden is expected to produce more food than any other piece of ground the same size on the farm, it is essential that it be given the best possible care. Large quantities of well rotted manure worked into the soil before the crops are planted are big helps in making the garden a success.

—O—

Records show that one year out of every ten, the last killing frost in spring occurs after May 1 in the vicinity of Ashland, after April 29 in the vicinity of Lexington, after April 21 in the vicinity of Louisville, after April 25 in the vicinity of Owensboro and after April 24 in the vicinity of Paducah. Gardeners can determine the best time to plant vegetables liable to be killed by frost by using this schedule of probable dates after which no more killing frosts will occur.

—O—

Planning a companion system of cropping is a good way to overcome the disadvantage of the limited space usually provided for the garden. Lettuce, radishes, spinach, early beets or early turnips can be grown between the rows of cabbage, tomatoes or cucumbers.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—With his grandfather, small Ramsey Milholland is watching the "Doubtful Day" Parade in his home town. The old gentleman, a veteran of the Civil war, endeavors to impress the youngster with the significance of the great conflict, and many years afterward the boy was to remember his words with startling vividness.

CHAPTER II.—In the schoolroom, a few years afterward, Ramsey was not distinguished for remarkable ability, though his two pronounced dislikes were arithmetic and "Recitations." In sharp contrast to Ramsey's backwardness is the precocity of little Dora Yocum, a young lady whom in his bitterness he denominates "Teacher's Pet."

CHAPTER III.—In high school, where he and Dora are classmates, Ramsey continues to feel that the girl delights to manifest her superiority, and the vindictiveness he generates becomes alarming, culminating in the resolution that some day he would "show" her.

CHAPTER IV.—At a class picnic Ramsey, to his intense surprise, appears to attract the favorable attention of Miss Milla Rust, young lady of about his own age, and the acknowledged belle of the class. Milla has the misfortune to fall into a trap set for her by Ramsey, and that youth promptly plunges to the rescue. The water is only some three feet deep, but Milla's gratitude for his heroic act is embarrassing. He is in fact taken captive by the fair one, to his great consternation.

CHAPTER V.—The acquaintance ripens, Ramsey and Milla openly "keeping company," while the former's parents wonder. His mother indeed goes so far as to express some disapproval of his choice, even hinting that Dora Yocum would be a more suitable companion, a suggestion which the youth receives with horror.

CHAPTER VI

Vacation, in spite of increased leisure, may bring inconvenience to people in Ramsey's strange but not uncommon condition. At home his constant air was that of a badgered captive—plainly silent under injustice; and he found it difficult to reply calmly when asked where he was going—an inquiry addressed to him, he asserted, every time he touched his cap, even to hang it up!

The amount of evening walking he did must also have been a trial to his nerves, on account of fatigue, though the ground covered was not vast. Milla's mother and father were friendly people, but saw no reason to "move out of house and home," as Mr. Rust said, when Milla had "callers"; and on account of the intimate plan of their small dwelling a visitor's only alternative to spending the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Rust as well as with Milla, was to invite her to "go out walking."

Evening after evening they walked and walked and walked, usually in company—at perhaps the distance of half a block—with Albert Paxton and Sadie Clews, though Ramsey now and then felt disgraced by having fallen into this class; for sometimes it was apparent that Albert casually had his arm about Sadie's waist. This allured Ramsey somewhat, but terrified him more. He didn't know how such matters were managed.

Evening After Evening They Walked and Walked and Walked.

Usually the quartet had no destination; they just went "out walking" until ten o'clock, when both girls had to be home—and the boys did, too, but never admitted it. On Friday evenings there was a "public open-air concert" by a brass band in a small park, and the four were always there.

Milla hung weightily upon his arm, and they dawdled, drifting from one side of the pavement to the other as they slowly advanced. Albert and Sadie, ahead of them, called "good night" from a corner, before turning down the side street where Sadie lived; and then, presently, Ramsey and Milla were at the latter's gate. He went in with her, halting at the front steps.

"Well, g'night, Milla," he said. "Want to go out walking tomorrow considered himself unfit to be seen walking with her.

He had a long afternoon of anguish, these becoming most violent when he tried to face the problem of his future course toward Milla. He did not face it at all, in fact, but merely writhed, and had evolved nothing when Friday evening was upon him and Milla waiting for him to take her to the "band concert" with "Aib and Sade." He made shift to seek a short interview with Albert, just before dinner.

"I got a pretty rotten headache, and my stomach's upset, too," he said, drooping upon the Paxton's fence. "I been gettin' worse every minute. You and Sadie go by Milla's, Albert, and tell her if I'm not there by ha'-pas'-seven, tell her not to wait for me any longer."

"How do you mean 'wait'?" Albert inquired. "You don't expect her to come pokin' along with Sadie and me, do you? She'll keep on sittin' there at home just the same, because she wouldn't have anything else to do, if you don't come like she expects you to. She hasn't got any way to stop waitin'!"

At this, Ramsey moaned, without affection. "I don't expect I can, Albert," he said. "I'd like to if I could, but the way it looks now, you tell her I wouldn't be much surprised maybe I was startin' in with typhoid fever or pretty near anything at all." He moved away, concluding feebly: "I guess I better crawl on home, Albert, while I'm still able to walk some. You tell her the way it looks now I'm liable to be right sick."

And the next morning he woke to the chafings of remorse, picturing a Milla somewhat restored in charm waiting hopefully at the gate, even after the half-past seven, and then, as time passed and the sound of the distant horns came faintly through the darkness, going sadly to her room—perhaps weeping there. It was a picture to wring him with shame and pity, but was followed by another which electrified him, for out of school he did not lack imagination. What if Albert had reported his illness too vividly to Milla? Milla was so fond! What if, in her alarm, she should come here to the house to inquire of his mother about him? What if she told Mrs. Milholland they were "engaged"?

She turned instantly away in the darkness, her hands over her cheeks; and in a panic Ramsey wondered if he hadn't made a dreadful mistake.

"I s'pose so," he said, stumbling toward the gate. "Well, I guess I got to be gettin' along back home."

He woke in the morning to a great self-loathing; he had kissed a girl. Mingled with the loathing was a curious pride in the very fact that caused the loathing, but the pride did not last long. He came downstairs morbid to breakfast, and continued this mood afterward.

At noon Albert Paxton brought him a note which Milla had asked Sadie to give him.

"Dearie: I am just wondering if you thought as much about something so sweet that happened last night as I did you know what. I think it was the sweetest thing. I send you one with this note and I hope you will think it is a sweet one. I would give you a real one if you were here now and I hope you would think it was sweeter still than the one I put in this note. It is the sweetest thing now you are mine and I am yours forever kiddo," he wrote.

"See here, Albert," his friend said breathlessly. "I got a favor. I want you to go over to Milla's—"

"I'm goin' to finish pressin' these trousers," Albert interrupted. "Then I've got my breakfast to eat."

"Well, you could do this first," said Ramsey, hurriedly. "It wouldn't hurt you to do me this little favor first. You just slip over and see Milla for me, if she's up yet, and if she isn't, you better wait around till she is, because I want you to tell her I'm a whole lot better this morning. Tell her I'm pretty near practicly all right again, Albert, and I'll probably write her a note or something right soon—or in a week or so, anyhow. You tell her—"

"Well, you act pretty funny!" Albert exclaimed, fumbling in the pockets of his coat. "Why can't you go on over and tell her yourself? But just as it happens there wouldn't be any use your goin' over there, or me, either."

"Why not?"

"Milla ain't there," said Albert, still searching the pockets of his coat. "When we went by her house last night to tell her about your headache and stomach and all, why, her mother told us Milla'd gone up to Chicago yesterday afternoon with her aunt, and said she left a note for you, and she said if you were sick I better take it and give it to you. Ramsey had always felt that she despised him and now, all at once, he thought that she was justified. Leper that he had become, he was unworthy to be even touching his cap to her! And as she nodded and went briskly on, he would have given anything to turn and walk a little way with her, for it seemed to him that this might fumigate his morals. But he lacked the courage, and, besides, he
